Missing woman found stabbed

DISCOVERY Consuelo Valencia-Russo was supposed to get her hair done Tuesday morning, but she missed the appointment.

That afternoon, the 44-year-old French teacher didn't pick up her son from his school.

But when she never came home that night, the family knew something was horribly wrong.

Yesterday evening, their fears were confirmed.

Valencia-Russo's body was found inside the trunk of her silver Toyota Corolla. Friends were told by police she had been repeatedly stabbed.

GTA swimmer New world record

GTA resident Amanda Reason, 15, celebrates her world record in the women's 50-metre breaststroke during the 2009 world swimming trials in Montreal Wednesday night. It is Canada's first world record in the long-course pool since Allison Higson did so in 1988. Story, page 2.

Garbage? Rubbish!

Mayor Miller defends Toronto against CNN report on strike

T.O.CivicStrike

American tourists should continue visiting Toronto despite a strike by city workers that has left mounds of rotting garbage throughout the city, Mayor David Miller said in an interview with CNN Thursday.

CNN host Ali Velshi, whose parents live in Toronto, introduced the segment with a video clip from a reporter entitled "Toronto Stinks" that featured overflowing trash bins and fenced-off temporary dump sites populated by thousands of garbage bags.

"It's actually much better than people would think from that clip," Miller said. "Torontonians have responded tremendously."

Miller said the strike doesn't seem to have affected Toronto's tourism industry.

"In terms of tourism, the city's buzzing," he said. "We've got the Dead Sea Scrolls ... the Art Gallery of Ontario has had a wonderful renovation ... and we have an opera house that has the best sound in the world. So despite all these challenges, it's actually a great time to visit Toronto."

The strike by about 24,000 inside and outside workers, now in its third week, began June 22 and has halted garbage pickup and a host of other city services. Negotiations between the city and union have proceeded slowly, but Miller said he believes a deal will eventually be reached.

"We want to be fair to the workers — these people deliver terrific services — but it has to be affordable to the city."

Miller's chat with CNN follows a San Francisco Chronicle blurb Sunday that made Toronto seem like a hazardous vacation destination. In the newspaper's World Travel Watch section, Canada heads a list of notable countries, ahead of troubled regions like Honduras, Mexico and Africa. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Revolting' conditions lead to charges

CRIME Four cemetery workers have been charged with dismembering bodies after police found what they called "startling and revolting" conditions at a historic cemetery near Chicago.

Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart said workers at the Burr Oak Cemetery in Alsip allegedly dug up more than 100 graves, dumped the bodies into unmarked mass graves and resold the plots to unsuspecting members of the public.

The three men and one woman were charged Thursday with one count each of dismembering a human body.

Burr Oak is the final resting place of many famous African-Americans, including blues singers Willie Dixon, Dinah Washington and Otis Spann.

Flanked by angry family members of the deceased, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said there's "a special place in hell" for those accused in the alleged scheme.

Dump site waste times prompt ire

Union-imposed wait times at dump sites across Toronto yesterday forced frustrated residents to sit in queues for hours. Scarborough resident Bill Bentley, 64, faced a three-hour delay to dispose of his trash at Bermondsey Transfer Station. He said another site had an eight-hour wait. Some were patient; others drove away. Bylaw officers wouldn't let even a fuming mother with three young boys jump the line. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Local claims world record

15-year-old posts fastest time ever in 50-m breaststroke

Fifteen-year-old GTA resident Amanda Reason broke the world record in the women's 50-metre breaststroke on Wednesday at the world championships swimming trials in Montreal.

It is Canada's first world record in the long course pool since Allison Higson lowered the mark in the 200 breaststroke in 1988.

This week's competition is determining the Canadian swimming team for the world aquatic championships scheduled for July 19 to Aug. 2.

Amanda Reason

Reason finished in 30.23 seconds at the Parc Jean-Drapeau outdoor pool to eclipse the previous world mark of 30.31 seconds set by Jade Edmistone of Australia in 2006. Reason held the Canadian record going into the final at 31.24 seconds set this past January.

"This is just amazing," said Reason. "I'm speechless, incredible. My coach (Kevin Thorburn) said I had to go out fast and get my head into the motion. And I did that well in the beginning and kept pushing it through to the end and I did it. It's all about confidence."

The swimmer originally from LaSalle, Ont. qualified for the world championships last night with a second-place finish in the 100-metre breaststroke.

This February Reason moved away from her home in LaSalle, near Windsor, to better pursue her dream. Moving in with her aunt in Brampton, she joined the elite Etobicoke Swim Club and started attending a special athletic program at Silverthorn Collegiate Institute, where she'll begin Grade 11 this fall. Public mad at Miller, but unions worse: Poll

T.O.CivicStrike

RESULTS The only thing that currently angers Torontonians more than its mayor, according to a new Toronto Star/Angus Reid poll, are the city's two striking unions.

The unflattering results, which include a plummeting approval rating for Mayor David Miller, come as the city workers' strike enters its 19th day and the drifts of trash lining city streets grow both taller and more putrid.

It also comes as tensions in this strike-weary city strain, over everything from illegal dumping to local residents complaining about temporary dump sites. On Thursday, a judge ordered striking CUPE workers to stop obstructing a private contractor's waste collection, although they will be allowed to picket outside.

76 A Toronto Star/Angus Reid poll revealed that 76 per cent of people disapproved of the striking unions.

But even though a full 67 per cent of those polled disapproved of Miller's handling of the strike, that number was eclipsed by Toronto's weeks-old, unabated wrath for the striking unions, which stood Thursday at 76 per cent.

Cops offer $50K reward in murder case

CRIME Toronto police posted a $50,000 reward yesterday for information that leads to the arrest of the "heartless coward" who savagely murdered 72-year-old double amputee Richard Clements last year.

Clements' bloody body was found in his 13th-floor Coin Street apartment, near Lake Shore Boulevard and Tenth Avenue, beside his overturned wheelchair on Dec. 3, 2008, Det.-Sgt. Brian Borg of the homicide squad said.

Post-mortem examinations determined Clements died of multiple stab wounds to the neck and chest.

Tory praises Pride support

A gay member of the Conservative caucus is applauding junior cabinet minister Diane Ablonczy's financial support for Toronto's Pride Week, a decision that put Ablonczy in the hot seat with some social conservatives.

And Senator Nancy Ruth says the MP who publicly criticized Ablonczy is one of only a handful who grumbled about the $400,000 tourism grant at a June caucus meeting.

"I give Ablonczy 100 per cent credit for choosing not politically to discriminate against something Pride Toronto had a legitimate reason to apply for and met all the criteria," Ruth said in an interview Thursday.

"I give Ablonczy 100 per cent credit for choosing not politically to discriminate against something Pride Toronto had a legitimate reason to apply for."
Senator Nancy Ruth

"It takes guts not to discriminate when you know there is a faction within your party who isn't going to like it. That takes guts and courage and I admire that."

Ruth was appointed to the Senate as an independent in 2005 by Liberal prime minister Paul Martin, but joined the Conservative caucus a year later.

She is a well-known women's rights activist, one of the founders of the Women's Legal Education and Action Fund (LEAF) and a member of the Order of Canada.

She says she has never felt any awkwardness about the fact she is gay from Prime Minister Stephen Harper or any of his staff.

"It just isn't an issue. I'm first and foremost a women's rights activist."

Company wins injunction against strikers

T.O.CivicStrike

A judge has granted an injunction to a Brampton waste disposal and collection business, preventing strikers with the Canadian Union of Public Employees from blockading or obstructing access to its Toronto and Brampton locations.

Although union members will be allowed to picket outside Wasteco for "informational purposes," they will not be permitted to delay Wasteco trucks going in or out of the premises for more than five minutes, Superior Court Justice Mary Anne Sanderson wrote in a 10-page decision.

"In my view, the value to CUPE 416 of such obstructive picketing is far outweighed by the harm to Wasteco, its customers and the public," Sanderson concluded.

"Where, as here, the picketing has obstructed a public thoroughfare, a danger has been posed to members of the public and the picketers themselves," the judge wrote.

"Wasteco contends it has been unfairly caught" in the strike against the city of Toronto because it is "a competitor of the city, and have said they have no labour dispute with Local 416 or the city of Toronto," the judge wrote.

Week 3

- Local 416, representing some 6,200 Toronto outside workers, has been on strike since June 22.

Bank withdrawals made after suspicious death

MYSTERY Last night investigators refused to discuss any possible motives for Consuelo Valencia-Russo's death, but it appears the single mother's debit and credit cards had been stolen. Shortly after her missed hair appointment, hundreds of dollars were withdrawn from Valencia-Russo's bank account. The account was accessed again later that day and a smaller amount was removed.

"We were praying she would come home safe."
Coun. Cesar Palacio

One police source confirmed the account was again accessed Wednesday, this time from outside the country, believed to be Mexico. Investigators are now reportedly analyzing surveillance footage from a North York bank to see if Valencia-Russo made the withdrawals herself.

At the victim's home last night, Toronto Coun. Cesar Palacio broke down in tears. "We were going to have (a press conference) at 7 p.m., but it was too late," he said. "We were praying she would come home safe."

Palacio is the father of Valencia-Russo's 14-year-old son, Nicholas. The teenager was the result of a brief relationship 15 years ago, but Palacio has been a part of Nicholas' life. In fact, last Saturday, the Ward 17 Davenport councillor attended the teen's birthday party.

Investigators said there was no reason to suspect Valencia-Russo, who was also known as Connie, was involved in any criminal activity.

Police interviewed Valencia-Russo's ex-husband, Alex Carrillio Baquero, who neighbours said was from Ecuador.

Neither he nor Palacio are suspects, said Det. Rick Ramjattan.

Stranded woman's prints taken

NAIROBI A Toronto woman facing jail in Kenya says she feels relieved after Canadian officials finally took her fingerprints to help settle her identity.

"I feel a lot better," Suaad Hagi Mohamud said yesterday by phone from Nairobi, where she has been stranded for seven weeks, eight days of that in jail.

"I really want to come back home."

Canadian consular officials, who for six weeks refused to have anything to do with the woman, took her prints and asked her such questions as where she lives, who her boss is at the ATS courier plant in Etobicoke and who is looking after her 12-year-old son in Toronto.

"I really want to come back home."
Suaad Hagi Mohamud

But they did not indicate when they might match her prints with those on her Somali refugee application 10 years ago.

Mohamud, 31, was about to leave Kenya May 17 after a short visit when airport officials stopped her for not looking like her Canadian passport photo — a common ruse for soliciting a bribe, she says.

The Kenyans jailed her. She was released eight days later on bail, pending trial.

BPA found in baby food, water

But chemical levels pose no risk, says Health Canada

Health Canada testing has detected bisphenol A in baby foods in glass jars with metal lids and in some 18.5-litre polycarbonate bottles of drinking water, but it says the levels are low and pose no health or safety concerns.

Detailed reports on levels of the chemical, also known as BPA, in various products purchased last year in Ottawa were posted on the Health Canada website Thursday.

The baby food survey covered 122 products sold last August under seven brands by six different companies. Among the 99 products where the BPA could be quantified, about 70 per cent had levels of less than one part per billion — well below the migration limit of 600 parts per billion set by a directive for BPA in food.

Purpose

- BPA can migrate from plastic and the plastic linings of metal cans and lids. A plastic coating on the lids prevents corrosion of the metal and contamination of the food.

"The low levels of BPA found in jarred baby products available for sale in Canada confirms Health Canada's previous assessment conclusion that the current dietary exposure to BPA through food packaging uses is not expected to pose a health risk," the analysis said.

Studies done in animals show BPA acts like the female hormone estrogen, and has been linked to cancer and infertility.

For the bottled water survey, researchers looked at samples of 54 different products sold under 21 brands by 16 companies.

Levels of BPA from the non-polycarbonate water products were below the "method detection limit" of 0.5 part per billion. But bisphenol A was detected in 13 of 17 samples from four of the five polycarbonate bottled water products.

Concentrations ranged from 0.5 to a high of 8.82 parts per billion, with an average of 1.5 parts per billion.

Soldiers' bodies return home

MILITARY The bodies of the two latest Canadian soldiers killed in Afghanistan have arrived back in Canada.

A military aircraft carrying the bodies of 38-year-old Master Cpl. Pat Audet of Montreal and 25-year-old Cpl. Martin Joannette of St-Calixte, Que., landed Thursday at CFB Trenton in eastern Ontario.

The two died Monday when their Griffon CH-146 helicopter crashed at an operating base northeast of Kandahar City.

The family of Joannette says he was a proud soldier who wore his wings tattooed to his forearm, and whose death has left a void in their hearts.

In a statement issued through the Canadian Forces, his wife, Marie Eve Dionne, says her husband's smile and his good humour were infectious.

The two men are the 123rd and 124th Canadian soldiers to die on the Afghan mission.

Audet was with 430 Tactical Helicopter Squadron while Joannette was with the 3rd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment.

Both were based at Valcartier, Que.

Sources have told The Canadian Press the crash occurred when the chopper clipped a security wall while trying to manoeuvre in a blinding cloud of dust.

Embarrassment no reason for security shield: Judge

SECURITY A federal judge says national security laws are not intended to shield intelligence agencies from embarrassment.

In a ruling released Thursday, Federal Court Justice Simon Noel says there is a "genuine public interest" in openly dealing with the subject of torture of detainees, and the use of information gathered through force.

The long-awaited judgment explains why Noel approved release of disputed sections of a 2006 inquiry report into the overseas torture of Maher Arar.

A federal inquiry found information supplied by the RCMP likely prompted the Americans to send Arar to Syria.

Tories say won't meet G8 targets

Calls greenhouse gas emissions reductions 'aspirational'

Less than 24 hours after Prime Minister Stephen Harper praised the G8 for its latest climate-change targets, his environment minister said those targets are "aspirational" and that Canada will not meet them.

Jim Prentice said reducing emissions by 80 per cent by the year 2050 is an "aspirational objective."

The best-case scenario for the Harper government's climate-change program — which does not yet have enforceable regulations in place — is a reduction in Canada's greenhouse-gas emissions of up to 70 per cent by 2050.

Prentice said Canada does not need to change its policy.

"The concept is that amongst the developed countries, some countries will undertake targets that are higher than that, some will have targets less than that," said Prentice.

"But it's an aspirational objective of 80 per cent in the entire developed world."

Prime Minister Stephen Harper, Germany's Chancellor Angela Merkel and France's President Nicolas Sarkozy look on as Junior 8 Summit participant Nigel Wodrich, 16, of London, Ont., greets U.S. President Barack Obama in L'Aquila, Italy, Thursday.

The G8 agreement, Prentice emphasized, "very carefully refers to an aggregate" reduction, not a commitment by each G8 member to meet it.

Prentice's language stood in contrast to that of U.S. President Barack Obama, who said Thursday afternoon the G8 had reached "a historic consensus on concrete goals for reducing carbon emissions.

Harper did not speak to Canadian reporters Thursday, but in brief comments to a pool camera, he said Canada's failure to even shoot for the targets it agreed to a day earlier does not undermine his government's credibility on climate change.

'We're going to plow ahead'

VICTORIA HANDYSIDES

The mother of a slain 13-year-old girl is preparing to head back to court, to yet again face one of the people involved with the rape and murder of her daughter.

"A fleeting moment of happiness is better than nothing." Peacha Atkinson

The Supreme Court of Canada has agreed to hear from prosecutors challenging 21-year-old Stephanie Bird's manslaughter conviction for her role in the vicious 2005 slaying of Nina Courtepatte.

"We're going to plow ahead and keep going at it until we win," Peacha Atkinson said Thursday. "A fleeting moment of happiness is better than nothing."

Bird is currently serving a 12-year sentence for her part in the crime. She was convicted of a lesser charge, after she claimed regret and left the scene before Nina took her last breath.

However, Courtepatte's mother believes otherwise.

"She didn't have a change of heart," Atkinson said. "She has no remorse."

Atkinson has sat through countless trials of those accused in Courtepatte's murder. Two men were found guilty of first-degree murder, a then-teenage girl was found guilty of second-degree murder, and another man was acquitted.

SALARY Chinese-owned companies say no missing wages are owed to a Chinese foreign worker who was employed at an Alberta oilsands project. Legal documents filed on behalf of Sinopec Engineering and SSEC Canada say the man agreed to contribute part of his wages to social welfare and insurance funds in China. The man is one of 132 Chinese men who worked at Canadian Natural Resources Ltd.'s Horizon project in 2007. Alberta Employment says $3 million was taken out of their bank accounts and the province is working to find the men in China to reimburse them. U.S. isotopes could push Canada out

HEALTH The extended shutdown of the troubled nuclear reactor at Chalk River has the U.S. government poised to invest millions to get back into the business of medical isotopes — a move that could eventually push Canada out.

An official from the National Nuclear Security Administration told the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, D.C. this week the ongoing outage, which usually produces about 60 per cent of the U.S. demand has prompted a "supply crisis" that has captured the attention of the White House.

Scientists warn of pig pandemic

Flu Outbreak

HEALTH German scientists are warning of a pig pandemic as tests suggest influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, can pass from humans to hogs and then infect a whole herd.

Virologists infected five pigs with the human strain of the H1N1 virus and put the sick pigs in a room with three healthy pigs. Within four days, all the pigs had the flu.

Canada is one of only two places where the virus has been found in pigs.

A research paper to be published Friday warns "the high transmissibility of the virus observed in humans also applies to pigs."

"A spillover of this virus to pigs is becoming more likely."
Virologists' report

"It must be assumed that this virus will spread fast and efficiently if introduced into swine farms, possibly establishing endemic infections," the paper says. "With the increasing numbers of human infections, a spillover of this virus to pigs is becoming more likely." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Migrants boosting housing

They're driving the recovery of real estate, says big bank

Recent immigrants are a major force driving housing demand, one of Canada's big banks says.

And it's clear Scotiabank expects that real estate trend to continue.

"Given Canada's aging population and relatively low fertility rates, longer-term household formation and housing needs will be largely determined by immigration," said senior economist Adrienne Warren.

Scotiabank's claim was in one of two upbeat bank reports released Thursday about encouraging signs in the housing market.

The Scotia Economic report cited census data that showed 72 per cent of immigrants lived in a dwelling owned by a household member in 2006, up from 68 per cent in 2001.

Warren said immigration could account for 75 per cent of the growth in Canada's population a decade from now.

"The better labour market performance of recent immigrants may reflect a favourable skills mix, with many employed in high-growth industries such as engineering, construction and skilled trades," Warren said.

Meanwhile, TD Economics said there are encouraging signs a bottom may be forming under the home-building market.

It cited an eight per cent increase in housing starts in June on top of a 10.8 per cent increase in May. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lure of the cities

- Of the more than one million immigrants who arrived between 2001 and 2006, 69 per cent settled in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, says Scotiabank.
- Fewer than three per cent chose to live in a rural area.

Stunning statistics

150 rapes a day – and those are reported ones

Dumisani Rebombo had not been circumcised, did house chores that were considered girls' work and was sick of being taunted for not being a man. So he took the only other course considered "manly" in his rural South African village: He raped a girl.

He was 15, the victim younger.

Twenty years later he searched for the woman to beg her forgiveness — a rarity in a nation where a culture of sexual violence is deeply embedded in society.

Rebombo agreed to share his story as researchers presented findings Thursday at an international conference outside Johannesburg that more than one in four South African men surveyed admitted to committing rape.

AIDS epidemic

- Some 5.2 million of South Africa's 50 million people are infected with the AIDS virus — the highest rate in the world.

A recent report published by Interpol said South Africa had the highest rape rate among its member states. Police figures recorded some 54,000 rapes in South Africa in 2006 — nearly 150 per day, or one for every 925 people in the country. That does not tell the whole story — advocates say many attacks go unreported because of the stigma. In comparison, Americans reported one rape for every 2,642 people in 2006, roughly a third of the South African rate.

"Rape is an expression of male sexual entitlement," said Rachel Jewkes, chief researcher of the survey.

"South Africa is an immensely patriarchal society. The history of the country has shaped the dominant forms of South Africa's racially defined masculinities." Preliminary findings of the report, released last month, were met with horror. But many were not surprised.

"This tells the story of many boys, of many men," said Rebombo, now a 48-year-old divorced father of three. His experience underscores the deep cultural roots of the problem in a country blighted by violence and the devastating emotional, social and economic legacy of apartheid. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Man kills sister to cleanse family's honour

It was hardly brotherly love.

A 24-year-old farmer stabbed his sister to death with a dagger to cleanse the family's honour, a Jordanian police official says.

The official says the man turned himself in and confessed to killing his 27-year-old sister because he heard rumours she was dating a man.

In some conservative areas of the Middle East, people generally disapprove of an unwed woman having any relationship with an unrelated man.

They consider it to reflect negatively on her family.

An average of 20 Jordanian women are killed annually in honour killings.

The government has tried to solve the problem with harsher sentences for perpetrators.

BROADCASTER Astral Media Inc. reported modest increases to both third-quarter profits and revenues on Thursday despite continued weakness in advertising sales. The Montreal-based company said net earnings from continuing operations climbed three per cent to $44.3 million or 79 cents per share for the quarter ended May 31.

HOUSING TD Economics said Thursday there are encouraging signs that a bottom may be forming under Canada's depressed homebuilding market, citing an eight per cent increase in housing starts in June on top of a 10.8 per cent increase in May. GM ready to return

Automaker prepares to exit bankruptcy

A shiny new General Motors Corp. will rise Friday from the twisted heap of metal — and crippling debts — of the old.

It will have fewer workers and brands, but it will have billions of dollars in government bailouts.

After clearing last minute court hurdles Thursday, GM was expected to announce Friday that it is poised to exit from Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in the United States. There is widespread speculation it will unveil a new look, changing its square logo to green from blue to show consumers that it really is leaner and greener. It is also slashing jobs in a drastic bid to cut its costs.

But experts say GM must produce vehicles people want to buy and change its image from a lumbering bureaucracy that makes gas guzzlers to one on the cutting edge of efficiency and quality.

"What they have to change is the essence of the company. For a car company, that means the cars," said Joseph D'Cruz, professor of strategic management at the University of Toronto's Rotman School of Management.

The Canadian operations will be unaffected by Friday's announcement. GM Canada went through its own painful restructuring, though it did not file for court protection here.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Challenges

1. Bad image: Consumers may still think of GM as teetering and take a pass on its vehicles.
2. Reduced sales force: With fewer showrooms, will buyers stroll over to a rival?
3. No real change at top: New CEO Fritz Henderson used to be GM's chief financial officer.
4. Product lineup: Just four brands, and observers say the automaker still lacks a good quality small car.
5. The board: Veteran GM directors outnumbered by new ones, including from the United Auto Workers union and from Canada. How will they steer the company?

Canwest shares drop 50 per cent

TRADING Canwest Global Communications shares lost more than half their value Thursday in the heaviest trading of the battered stock in nearly eight years.

The media giant's shares fell 7.5 cents to close at 6.5 cents on the Toronto Stock Exchange, a drop of nearly 54 per cent, on a volume of nearly 10.2 million shares traded. A company once worth more than $2 billion years ago and about $600 million in early 2008 now has a stock market value of just less than $7 million.

The heavy trading triggered speculation the company could be on the brink of filing for bankruptcy protection. Canwest, which reports its third-quarter earnings Friday, is struggling under about $4 billion in debt.

New era of pension reform is upon us

InBusiness

Charles Davies

As Canada's population rapidly ages, financing retirement has become a huge concern. Existing public pensions won't provide enough money, entitlements and personal savings are inadequate, and company pension plans are either underfunded or cover too few people.

All this adds up to growing pressure on government to come up with new public pension offerings to help fill the gap. There are two proposals that could gain traction.

The first is the Canada Supplementary Pension Plan, an idea first promoted last year by pension guru Keith Ambachtsheer from the CD Howe Institute. The CSPP would work like the CPP, with voluntary payroll deductions (to an annual maximum of $20,000) put into individual retirement savings accounts. The funds would be managed by a body that is arm's length from government, not unlike the Canada Pension Plan Investment Board. The goal would be to combine eventual income from the CSPP with other forms to replace at least 60 per cent of pre-retirement income.

A second proposal is the Universal Pension Plan espoused by the Canadian Association of Retired Persons (CARP), the lobby group for middle-aged and senior Canadians. The UPP would essentially be an extension of the existing CPP and would also be similar to the CSPP. Unlike the CSPP, however, contributions would be mandatory, and the goal would be to replace 70 per cent of pre-retirement income.

PensionSeries

(Editor's note: This is the final part of a three-part series by Charles Davies on pension plans.)

Other variants of public plans are being talked about in Alberta and British Columbia. So far, Ottawa is ignoring the issue, perhaps because it has more immediate problems. The pension crunch isn't going away, though. If you believe CARP, it won't just be the poorer classes that will strain to make ends meet for the rest of their lives.

It's already happening. Go into any big box retailer and check out the staff. Chances are many are people who have "retired" from their principal jobs, but who seriously need this income.

For younger baby boomers, those who have a decade or so before normal retirement, the prospect of working indefinitely won't sit well. Count on them putting the heat on politicians to extend the CPP or come up with an additional plan. Of necessity, a new era of pension reform is upon us.

Women, children hit hardest by strike

UrbanCompass

April Lindgren

metronews.ca/lindgren

T.O.CivicStrike

Torontonians are making do as the city workers' strike drags on. The fact is, though, some people find it easier to make do than others.

Money is the most obvious demarcation line between the citizens struggling to get by and those who are only mildly inconvenienced by the loss of city-operated programs and services. Toronto's exclusive Granite Club, for instance, is applying for a permit to dispose of garbage dropped off by its members. Such are the privileges of membership with a $53,000 initiation fee. The affluent can also escape to cottages where their children swim and canoe in glittering lakes.

Meanwhile, the 31 per cent of Toronto children who live in poverty are left to navigate garbage-strewn streets and gaze longingly at city pools that are closed. City recreation programs are cancelled. And the parks these children play in are doubling as garbage depots.

While the city's poorest kids are the most obvious strike victims, women come a close second. In a society where mothers still shoulder most of the responsibility for family organization, they are the ones frantically seeking alternatives to the strikebound city-run child-care centres.

"We've had a lot of calls from people checking out the possibilities," says Bonnie Doucette, director of the privately-operated Green Apple Kids child-care centre. "They are mostly women and there are notes of desperation in some of their voices."

Less obviously, the strike also has the potential to undermine the sense that we live in a safe, secure community. Police Chief Bill Blair fuelled such anxieties this week when he warned the cancellation of youth programs, particularly in troubled neighbourhoods, may lead to "bad choices" by idle young people.

But security and safety can be undermined in more subtle ways. Dishevelled parks, litter-strewn streets and random piles of rancid garbage, for instance, fuel the impression of a city where basic societal norms are being flouted and where nobody is in charge. The lack of substantive negotiations between the unions and the city suggest this impression is perilously close to reality.

Blockbuster deal

Turkoglu in, Marion out in four-team trade

The Toronto Raptors acquired Turkish forward Hedo Turkoglu from the Orlando Magic while picking up forward Devean George plus swingman Antoine Wright from the Dallas Mavericks in a pair of sign-and-trade deals Thursday.

In exchange, the Raptors sent cash to Orlando, a 2016 second-round draft pick to the Memphis Grizzlies, and forward Kris Humphries, centre Nathan Jawai and cash to the Mavericks, who also signed Shawn Marion.

Dallas also sent cash to the Magic, and traded swingman Jerry Stackhouse and cash to the Grizzlies for guard Greg Buckner to complete the complicated four-team deal.

The end result is a dramatic roster facelift for the Raptors, who finished a dismal 33-49 last season.

"We are very pleased to have landed one of the top free agents available this summer," Raptors GM Bryan Colangelo said in a release. "Hedo Turkoglu is an ideal fit basketball wise, and his diverse skill set and size will make him a tremendous addition to our already offensively potent team."

The six-foot-10 Turkoglu was one of the biggest free agents available, coming off an appearance in the NBA finals with Orlando. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hard to ignore attraction of superstars

FieldofPlay

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

When it comes to sport there is no greater force than the power of one.

This reality has been made plain by the recent odysseys of more than one superstar.

Roger Federer's triumph over Andy Roddick at Wimbledon was a match for the ages.

The immovable force prevailed over the challenger in spite of the latter serving up rockets, which screamed across centre court. The thrill of the grass resulted in a marathon with Federer emerging as the most prolific male tennis player of all time.

To watch his journey on that day was mesmerizing — the talk around millions of water coolers the next morning.

And then there is our relentless fascination with Tiger Woods.

Golf's sparkling savant has us transfixed. The television networks are glued to his every move, even in the rare case he is not in contention. We, the fans, never tire of dissecting his every approach and tricky putt.

If we are not watching Woods, it would seem, we are not really watching the tournament at all. We are all collectively the moths to his brilliant flame.

Which brings us to the resilient Lance Armstrong.

At 37 years of age, Armstrong has returned to the Tour de France and in spite of the cloudy suspicion surrounding his magnificent past, he rides on in plain sight. Once again, Armstrong is challenging for the lead in one of the most gruelling tests sport has to offer.

It is a must to check on Armstrong's progress every day although few of us would cast a second glance cycling's way in his absence. His is just that compelling a story.

This is the stuff of legend and, throughout time, sport has been dominated by these solitary, spectacular figures.

Muhammad Ali, Jack Nicklaus and Usain Bolt have all been in that category. They are icons commanding our rapture just as Federer, Woods and Armstrong have.

It is our fascination with the outer limits of human achievement.

While we all like to think of ourselves as good team players what we truly aspire to be is an individual superstar just like them.

GOLD CUP With a pair of victories in its first two games, Canada has become the surprise of the CONCACAF Gold Cup. Already eliminated from World Cup qualifiers, the undefeated Canadians can clinch the Gold Cup Group A top spot and advance to the quarter-finals with a victory or tie against Costa Rica in their final group stage match Friday night.

GOLF Top-ranked Lorena Ochoa, 2007 champion Cristie Kerr and qualifier Jean Reynolds each shot a 2-under 69 to share the early lead in the opening round of the U.S. Women's Open.

COYOTES The NHL is accusing Phoenix Coyotes owner Jerry Moyes of trying to derail the sale of the team to a group headed by Jerry Reinsdorf by filing a flurry of requests for depositions before the July 24 deadline for formal submission of the bid. The league also says another potential buyer for the team has surfaced, although it would not identify the would-be purchaser.

Jays looking north

DAVID SINGH
for Metro Toronto

Obviously the biggest news out of Blue Jay land this week has been Toronto's admission that it's willing to listen to trade offers for franchise player Roy Halladay.

That harsh possibility led to whispers that the Jays are entering a period of tight fiscal responsibility. In baseball, such a phase usually leads to clubs relying heavily on their farm systems to produce talented players at low costs.

At the very least, should Halladay leave, the Jays can take solace in the fact that they focused heavily on shoring up their pitching depth during this year's draft. And, after examining the results of the 2009 draft, fans can realistically hope that the future of Toronto's rotation will have a distinctly Canadian flair to it.

Toronto's first four selections in the draft were pitchers. Of that group, the second and third picks — James Paxton (Ladner, B.C.) and Jake Eliopoulos (Newmarket) — are Canucks.

Jays' assistant general manager Alex Anthopoulos, who was born and raised in Montreal, says while drafting the best player available is the No. 1 priority, selecting a Canadian is a supreme bonus.

"We believe that the best Canadian players should be playing for Canada's team," Anthopoulos said. "I think in some sense we also have a responsibility to the country, being Canada's only team, to make sure that we monitor the Canadian market more thoroughly than anybody else.

"That's not to say that we're going to draft players just because of their passport," he added. "But when there's a player that's out there who is Canadian and we like ... we're going to try to be diligent in getting him."

The Jays led the majors by nabbing a total of eight Canadians out of the 42 that were selected in the 2009 draft. It ended a streak of five straight years during which the Milwaukee Brewers (who are helmed by Canadians Doug Melvin and Gord Ash) led the league in selecting Canadians.

"I think it's something that we've talked about all the time," Anthopoulos said of drafting homegrown talent.

"The Canadians that we did pick are players we believe in. They happen to be Canadian, which is an added bonus that we're proud of."

Anthopoulos' rise

- Alex Anthopoulos, 32, is a shining example of a rising Canadian baseball executive. Starting off as an intern in the Montreal Expos media relations department, he eventually worked his way up to co-ordinator of scouting operations with the club in 2002. The next year, he joined the Jays as a scouting co-ordinator, before becoming vice-president, baseball operations and assistant GM with Toronto in 2006.

Real Draco revealed

Potter schoolmate a complete coward: Felton

ANNE BRODIE
for Metro Canada

Tom Felton, who plays Hogwart's dastardly teen wizard-in-training Draco Malfoy, is all sunny smiles while meeting press in a Toronto hotel.

It's surprising after the busy week he has had promoting Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince — the newest addition to the Potter movie franchise.

There was the London premiere on Tuesday night, a full day of media in Toronto, and then a quick flight to New York for an international press junket.

"Sunday, I get my roots done in England and Monday we film Deathly Hallows," says Felton.

Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince hits theatres next week

Tom Felton returns as Draco Malfoy in Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince.

At 21, he's an old hand at the Potter game. He was ten when he first played Malfoy and now — in the sixth Harry Potter outing — he has his most dramatic moments yet as his character takes on more of a key role in the series.

"I was very nervous when I first read the script," he says. "I thought it might be beyond my capabilities. But I was absolutely thrilled to turn this slightly two-dimensional character into a real bundle of emotion."

Even though he has played Malfoy in five previous films, Felton says he had a revelation about his character while shooting The Half-Blood Prince.

"You assume Draco's this confident, cool, solid person when in reality he's just a complete coward. He's terrified of the world around and that's why he attempts to bully people around him. I try to do the opposite really.

"It only came to me now. It's nothing to do with his personal self, he's not bad. The people have raised him to be the way he is. I think he's desperate to be nice, but he just can't be. He doesn't have an option, he's never been taught how to."

With two more films to be made, Felton says he is still grappling with the legacy and meaning of the Potter phenomenon.

"It's crazy to think about it, but it won't sink in until later. I keep thinking about showing my (future) kids my DVDs and saying, 'Look, there's daddy when he was ten years old.'

"I'm very proud we have something hard that will always be there, proof of our existence in the world. Years later on we'll think, bloody hell, that was truly something epic."

Idiotic Brüno tops bumbling Borat

Brüno
Director: Larry Charles
Stars: Sacha Baron Cohen
Classification: 18A
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕⊕

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

REVIEW Sacha Baron Cohen follows up his 2006 hit Borat with another mockumentary about a clueless outsider exploring America — and he may well have topped himself.

The new film excels because of its more focused subject matter — celebrity and homosexuality — and its more idiotic protagonist. Whereas Borat was a bumbling outsider, out of his depths in American culture, Brüno is all swagger and confidence.

Sure, he's an idiot, but he's also his own biggest fan (after his assistant's assistant, Lutz), which makes him that much easier to laugh at.

The story follows Baron Cohen's Austrian TV fashion reporter trying to become a celebrity in the U.S. after being sacked for disrupting Milan Fashion Week.

He tries everything he can think of to become the "biggest Austrian superstar since Hitler," from trying to make a sex tape with Ron Paul to adopting a baby from Africa, but eventually realizes his sexuality is holding him back.

"I looked at big stars like Tom Cruise, John Travolta and Kevin Spacey, and I realized they had one thing in common — they're straight."

While many of the laughs come from shock (there is an awful lot of male genitalia in this movie, including one specimen that shouts at the camera), the best humour in Brüno comes when Baron Cohen lets his equally un-self-aware subjects dig their own graves.

Two L.A. public relations pros do a great disservice to their profession's reputation, displaying a level of vapidity to rival Brüno's — only they're not acting. Equally scary is a series of interviews Baron Cohen conducts with stage parents trying to get their toddlers a gig in a photo shoot he's planning.

No matter what he suggests — lit phosphorus, radical weight loss — the parents insist their babies are up for it.

Once again, Baron Cohen proves that no matter how ridiculous of a character he creates, he can find real people out there that are even more ridiculous — and aren't afraid to prove it on camera.

Hayden Panettiere plays the object of a young man's affection in I Love You, Beth Cooper.

Cooper lacks fun

I love You, Beth Cooper

Director: Christopher Columbus
Stars: Hayden Panettiere, Paul Rust
Classification: PG
Rating:

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

"Who said that this was supposed to be fun?" sneers Hayden Panetierre midway through I Love You, Beth Cooper, and it's a good question. After all, why should audiences expect anything worthwhile from veteran hack director Christopher Columbus, now eight years removed from his association with the Harry Potter franchise?

Not that there aren't some signs of ambition here.

Adapted from Simpsons writer Larry Doyle's novel of the same name, I Love You Beth Cooper attempts to deconstruct the teen-coming-of-age comedy, setting up a familiar plot — hopeless geek (Paul Rust) courts his dream girl (Panettiere) across one wild, incident-laden evening — and then taking the action in (hypothetically) unexpected directions.

Unfortunately, Columbus doesn't have the sly touch or tonal control required for satire. Most of the scenes have a stilted, hesitant quality, or else end up spiralling wildly over the top (an extended sequence set at an only-in-the-movies house party is simply painful).

Panettiere is suitably perky as the film's eponymous object of desire, but at this point, the blonde goddess with secret insecurity issues is a tired (and insulting) cliché.

It's almost as dire as the love-struck social misfit — with Rust doing a poor man's McLovin — or the closeted best friend (Jack Carpenter, pulling Duckie duty as our hero's quirky sidekick).

The only oasis of relief is provided by Alan Ruck as Rust's understatedly cool dad: His appearance evokes memories of Ferris Bueller's Day Off, giving us something to think about as I Love You, Beth Cooper clunks gracelessly towards its faux-bittersweet conclusion.

Tight thriller digs deep

The Hurt Locker

Director: Kathryn Bigelow
Stars: Jeremy Renner
Classification: STC
Rating:

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

A scene from The Hurt Locker.

REVIEW If "war is a drug," as states the on-screen quote at the beginning of The Hurt Locker, then its main character is clearly an addict.

In the latest movie to ponder the subject of war, The Hurt Locker takes a fresh approach to the recent glut of Iraq-themed films (Stop-Loss, Redacted, etc…) by pointing the camera specifically at troopers assigned to disable stray bombs.

Whereas previous Iraq-based films suffered through audience indifference, this Kathryn Bigelow-helmed thriller wins big by focusing more on the nail-biting suspense of Man versus Improvised Explosive Device.

Don't get me wrong. It's not all about unseen enemies. There is still the added uneasiness of omnipresent locals who purvey the soldiers with suspicious, unknowing eyes. But it is just that apprehension that Bigelow (Point Break) captures throughout the film, giving it a thoroughly engaging heftiness.

Jeremy Renner (28 Weeks Later) stars as James, the leader of the bomb squad who constantly unnerves his fellow soldiers with his recklessness. Based on journalist Mark Boal's experience while embedded with such a squad, this film works more as a fascinating character study than an action-packed thriller.

Played coyly by its little-known stars, their anxiety is felt through strained performances as well as the film's desolate look.

Angling for truth

Documentary explores dangers of over-fishing

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

When thinking about summer movies, the mind tends to drift towards giant robots, glorious explosions, and overpaid movie stars. Thoughtful documentaries about the potential global dangers of over-fishing don't exactly spring to mind.

"It's not a natural subject for the movies, is it?" joked director Rupert Murray while speaking to Metro about his new documentary The End Of The Line. "You can't really film over-fishing," he said.

"But you can paint a picture of the concept by gathering a spectrum of statistics, talking heads, and on-the-ground-experience and then editing it together to give audiences the story of a crime that goes on all over the world."

What Murray is referring to is the practice of industrial over-fishing, which is currently catching fish faster than they can repopulate. The practice has already put several fish on the endangered species list and has the potential to lead to the extinction of many more, destroying ecosystems and putting millions of fisherman out of work.

It's not an issue that's widely discussed, but one with potentially disastrous consequences.

"I think people look at fish and think food. They don't think about fish welfare," said Murray. "What our film tries to do is say that this affects everyone whether you eat fish or not. Scientists have even found a link between over-fishing and climate change. It affects the whole planet and there are real consequences for everybody."

The film is an entertaining but sobering account of this issue, revealing many shocking truths like the fact that high-end restaurants including London's Nobu openly serve endangered species.

"There is a warning on the menu that says 'this fish is endangered, please ask you server for an alternative if you're offended.' But why is it on the menu in the first place," asked Murray. "Why on earth do they think it's acceptable? You wouldn't serve an endangered tiger or lion, but that's the unfortunate thing about sea predators is that they're so delicious."

The movie does suggest that the issue can be resolved, but not without acknowledging the problem and making a serious effort to solve it. Murray doesn't think his film will directly change anything, but hopes it will at least alert audiences to the issue for the first time.

Paolo Sorrentino's Il Divo chronicles the life of controversial Italian politician Giulio Andreotti.

Posturing mars Il Divo

Il Divo
Director: Paolo Sorrentino
Stars: Toni Servillo
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●

ADAM NAYMAN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Early in Il Divo, a priest informs an associate — who just happens to be his country's leader — that "his irony is abysmal."

It's doubtful that Paolo Sorrentino intended this line as a piece of auto-critique, but it nevertheless underlines the failings of his film about the legendarily corrupt former Italian prime minister Giulio Andreotti.

To call Andreotti a Teflon man would be an understatement: Despite coming under suspicion (and at one point even being convicted) of everything from bribery and extortion to murder, he kept finding ways to beat the rap, and currently sits as a "Senator for Life" at age 90.

It's a sad state of affairs, but any value Il Divo might have had as rabble-rousing is flattened by Sorrentino's rampaging, self-reflexive technique, an unholy amalgam of De Palma, Scorsese and Stone — with perhaps a pinch of Tarantino, to taste.

These influences are never more apparent than in the opening scenes, which introduce the hunched, eponymous protagonist (Toni Servillo) in hushed counterpoint to his inner circle, who strut through the corridors of power like Reservoir Dogs characters.

But Sorrentino isn't satirizing their tough-guy largesse so much as luxuriating in it. His florid direction is like an analogue to their posturing, and he keeps it up for most of the film's running time. Servillo's lead performance is appropriately strange, but he's let down by the script.

It's a lazy cop out that allows Sorrentino to evacuate anything resembling a real point-of-view on material that deserves better than vacuous showmanship.

Before Brüno came Buster, Charlie ...

Many regard Sacha Baron Cohen's brand of humour as envelope pushing absurdity that rides the thin line between bad taste and very bad taste.

For instance, in Borat, the titular character says he came to America with "a jar of gypsy tears to protect me from AIDS." As if that wasn't squirm inducing enough, he topped it off with jabs at Jews, homosexuals, the American way-of-life and the good people of Kazakhstan.

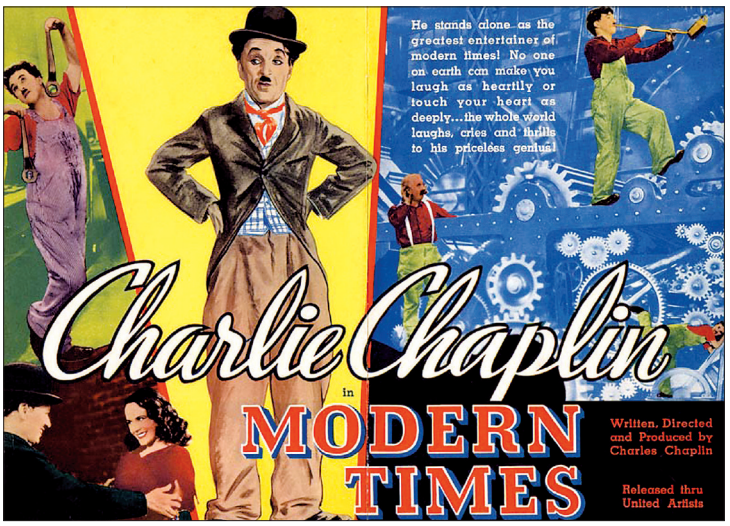
That movie ruffled more than a few feathers upon release in 2007, and that outrage now seems to be spilling over to the release of his new film.

In Brüno, which hits theatres this weekend, he plays a campy fame-seeking fashionista who wants to be "the biggest Austrian superstar since Adolph Hitler." Rashad Robinson of GLAAD told the New York Times that while the movie's satire is "well-meaning," it's also "problematic in many places and outright offensive in others."

As un-politically correct as the results of Cohen's modus operandi to expose homophobia are — he extracts embarrassing, often racist or downright stupid reactions from people not in on the joke — he is simply following in the cinematic tradition of using irreverent humour to hold a mirror up to society.

Silent comedians Buster Keaton, the Keystone Cops and Harold Lloyd infused their work with social commentary, using slapstick to highlight man's struggle to survive in a swiftly changing society.

Charlie Chaplin's most famous character, the perpetually down-on-his-luck Tramp, was a metaphor for "the lowest of the lower classes," a comparison that became even more poignant with the advent of the Depression.



Early 20th century comedians like Charlie Chaplin were among the first practitioners of film satire.

Moving forward, director Sam Wood laced his screwball comedy The Devil and Miss Jones with comments on labour unrest and class distinctions, while Tim Robbins' mockumentary Bob Roberts was a caustically comic piece on running for Senatorial office and Monty Python members redefined irreverence with their two looks at organized religion, The Meaning of Life and The Life of Brian.

Whether or not Brüno will accomplish the goal shared by Wood and the members of Monty Python — that is to make audiences examine their own fears and prejudices — remains to be seen, but David Kilmnick, CEO of the Long Island Gay and Lesbian Youth thinks it can't hurt.

"It's important in life when you're dealing with the daily struggles of inequality that you take a second to sit back and laugh."
Long Island Gay and Lesbian Youth CEO David Kilmnick

"It's important in life when you're dealing with the daily struggles of inequality that you take a second to sit back and laugh," he says. "That's always been the medicine for those who've been oppressed."

Joseph's journey

Actor still picking adventurous roles

Movie feature

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News

Joseph Gordon-Levitt loves movies. He's been making them most of his life, and he just screened his first short film, Sparks, at Sundance. But he can't stand the coming attractions. "When a trailer is playing for a movie I really want to see, I always avert my eyes and plug my ears," he explains. "They give too much away, and they really can eat into your experience of watching a movie."

Well, not to give too much away, but Gordon-Levitt, who's transitioned seamlessly from a hard-working child actor to the go-to actor for risky, inventive indie films, has a pair of movies coming out this summer that show some new sides to the 28-year-old veteran.

First up is (500) Days of Summer, an inventive, lyrical look at a relationship from the guy's perspective. The film re-teams him with Zooey Deschanel, who last appeared with Gordon-Levitt in 2001's psychodrama Manic.

"I get a really big kick out of it because I get to work with whoever has something cool to contribute."
Joseph Gordon-Levitt about his website HitRecord.org

After mining dramatic depths in films like Brick and Mysterious Skin, he effortlessly steps into the role of the romantic lead.

Next month, Gordon-Levitt is in a whole different ballpark, playing Cobra Commander in the live-action update of G.I. Joe.

But while publicity for the action flick has started carpeting the globe, there's been nary a mention of his mysterious mega-villain. And he'd like to keep it that way.

"There are certain things about it that I want people to see in the movie." There's that thing he has about previews, after all.

And it only gets more mysterious after that, as he's now filming Christopher Nolan's Inception, also starring Leonardo DiCaprio and Marion Cotillard. Aside from the cast, almost nothing is known about the project.

"He wants to present it to the world the way he wants to present it, instead of letting me tell you about it or letting conjecture colour people's perceptions of it," Gordon-Levitt says Nolan. "But I can tell you that it's really cool."

Joseph Gordon-Levitt stars opposite Zooey Deschanel in 500 Days of Summer.

And as much acclaim as he received as an actor, Gordon-Levitt has aspirations behind the camera as well, which he's been fostering for years with his website, HitRecord.org.

"I get a really big kick out of it because I get to work with whoever has something cool to contribute," he says of the collaborative nature of the site, the ethos of which is, let's all do this together and see what we can make.

"It puts the focus back where it should be, which is on the creativity as opposed to some of the politics and fashion that can get in the way of creativity in the more old-fashioned way of making movies," he says.

And advances in technology have only made it easier.

"This generation of filmmakers, we have such incredible technology on our hands," he explains. "We could make a movie with this camera that I have in my pocket and cut it on the computer you have in your backpack and put it out online and let the whole world see it without leaving the room."

Fashion icon, warts and all

Valentino: The Last Emperor

Director: Matt Tyrnauer
Stars: Valentino Garavani, Giogio Armani
Classification: STC
Rating: ⊕⊕⊕½

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Valentino: The Last Emperor offers audiences a privileged glimpse into the life of the legendary Italian designer Vanentino Garavani. Filmed over two years, the movie is hardly a flattering puff piece.

Instead first-time director Matt Tyrnauer captures all sides of the designer, presenting not just an icon with a life of obscene wealth and celebrity hobnobbing, but a difficult artist and a perfectionist who lives in a bubble. It's a fascinating portrait that gives audiences a glimpse at a man who normally keeps the world at arm's length.

Of course, that's not to say that the movie demeans Valentino. Tyrnauer's ever-present camera simply portrays the man as he is — flaws and all. The film covers a fairly difficult period of Valentino's life as he saw his company purchased by new owners who would rather hawk overpriced handbags than produce the costly hand-crafted clothing that defines the company.

You can tell Valentino is wary of the future and plans to end his career before the company's reputation is tarnished for a quick buck. The movie ends with a surreal $40 million party celebrating Valentino's 45th anniversary with a cavalcade of celebrities, a massive presentation of the designer's best work, a bizarre Cirque Du Soleil inspired presentation, fireworks, and ridiculously expensive catering.

GETTY IMAGES
Designer Valentino Garavani and actress Anne Hathaway arrive at the L.A. premiere of Valentino: The Last Emperor.

Tyrnauer found an intriguing heart for his film in the symbiotic relationship between Valentino and his business partner Giancarlo Giammetti, who have barely spent a day apart in decades.

Valentino may have all of the neurosis and antisocial tendencies of a true artist, but in Giancarlo he found a strong partner to manage the finances and image of his company. Together they created a billion dollar empire and an impossibly suave character named Valentino who became a legend in the fashion world.

Given how guarded the pair have been for decades, it's fascinating to see the truth behind the manufactured image finally slip out, even if only for 90 minutes.

Barrymore heads to N.Y. newsroom

Will it be a busy news week for Drew Barrymore?

On Monday, a romantic comedy starring Barrymore as an older-than-usual newspaper intern is scheduled to arrive for several days' shooting at the New York headquarters of The Associated Press.

Barrymore and a production crew will be on hand during the week to shoot scenes for Going the Distance.

The AP's newsroom will serve as the setting for the mythical New York Sentinel, where Barrymore's character works.

Meanwhile, real-life newsgathering will continue around her as usual by the AP's editorial staff in the sprawling facility, home to the AP since 2004, which covers roughly the size of two American football fields.

Several scenes are expected to be shot for the film, which also stars Justin Long and is directed by Nanette Burstein (American Teen and The Kid Stays in the Picture). Also featured are Christina Applegate and Jason Sudeikis. The film, a New Line Cinema production, depicts Barrymore and Long as a couple struggling with their long-distance relationship.

New York's Daily News, based in the same Manhattan office building as the AP's headquarters, will also play a part in the film, appearing as a fictional rival newspaper to the Sentinel.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Payment for use of the AP newsroom will go to the AP Emergency Relief Fund, which helps AP staff and family members worldwide cope with catastrophes not covered by company benefits or insurance, according to AP spokeswoman Ellen Hale.

Hometown heroes

Rural Alberta Advantage blends indie hooks, rollicking roots

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

As the Rural Alberta Advantage travel the highway between Vancouver and Seattle, they can't help but be amazed at how their lives have turned out. "It's so surreal," says keyboardist Amy Cole on the phone from a stretch of B.C. road. "This time last year no one would have predicted that we'd be on a month long tour outside of Ontario."

Rural Alberta Advantage's debut album, Hometowns, was re-released this week on Bright Eyes' label Saddle Creek.

It's true, a lot has happened for this infectious Toronto-based indie rock act since they self-released their debut, Hometowns, early last year. For months the disc went relatively unnoticed, but in November 2008 online music store eMusic featured them as their artist of the month. Soon enough the buzz grew and in May it was announced that the band had singed to Bright Eyes' label Saddle Creek — the label re-released their album on July 7.

While the trio is thrilled with the attention, they admit that it's been an overwhelming few months.

"It's nerve-wracking," says singer Nils Edenloff, who originally hails from Edmonton. "There is a lot of pressure having come this far and playing for people we never would have gotten a change to play for."

"But we're getting a lot of attention right now that not a lot of bands get, so we want to maximize the advantages," adds Cole.

Fortunately, the RAA should have nothing to worry about. The group's record is a brilliant collection of contagious indie hooks mixed with rollicking roots, and drummer Paul Banwatt is a monster on the skins. Not only is it incredibly catchy, but the subject matter, which is mostly about Edenloff's affection for Alberta, is easily relatable to anyone who's moved from where they grew up to somewhere new.

"We never set out to start an Alberta band and write songs about Alberta," he says. "But I found myself writing more and more about the province because that's just what I know, about things that were personal and close."

Still, playing songs about Alberta sure helps when you actually play the province. Edenloff says that his recent hometown gig "went better than I ever could have hoped for."

"When we play other places people say, 'I don't know Alberta, but I identify with the songs,'" he continues. "When we played Alberta, people said, 'I understand these songs and they really speak to me.'"

But while most audiences are hearing these songs for the first time, the RAA have been playing them for well over a year. Surprisingly, they haven't tired of their tunes yet.

"It's like we're playing them for the first time when we play for people who haven't heard them," says Cole. "That being said we're trying to work on new material on the road, so when we're eventually back home we'll have some material all ready to polish."

New disc captures Judas Priest in concert

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

If any band understands the changes the music industry is undergoing right now, it's Judas Priest. The metal stalwarts have been around for nearly four decades, and while they're still going strong, guitarist K.K. Downing worries for new acts.

"It's tough for new bands to get support," he says on the phone from a hotel room in Connecticut. "The industry is in the worst possible shape right now — record companies don't have the resources to nurture up and coming talent."

It's even more difficult for heavy metal acts to get their foot in the door, says this rock 'n' roll legend, as so much has already been done. "If you put Black Sabbath, Judas Priest and Iron Maiden together, a lot of metal territory was covered," he says. "Then throw in Machine Head and Megadeth and Pantera and what else is left?"

Judas Priest

Over the last few years Downing's band has actually managed to create some of their most complex music of their career. The epic 2008 release Nostradamus was well received and their tours continue to draw huge crowds.

But just because they keep producing new tunes doesn't mean they've forgotten their roots. In fact, on their current tour they're playing their 1980 smash hit British Steel from front to back, in honour of its 30th anniversary.

"We would never have put this set list together in a million years," says Downing. "We're playing songs we'd never performed before. But maybe we should have always been doing these tracks. The crowd knows them better than we thought they knew them."

While Downing, now in his late 50s, feels as if they're performing these old songs as vigorously as they did in their 20s, he knows that's not quite true.

"It's amazing when I look at YouTube and see how we played the songs back then," he says. "It was pretty damn good then — you have to work hard to make it as good. You think you get better over the years, but when you're young and really pumped up it's remarkable what you can pull off."

As the band commemorates a past chapter in their lives, they're also closing the door on a more recent one. On July 14th the band will release A Touch Of Evil, a live disc that covers their tours from 2005 to 2008.

It's their first live release (they have four other ones) since original singer Rob Halford rejoined the band, and mostly features older tracks that have never appeared on their concert discs.

If you missed those shows, you'd better get the new record, because, Downing says, it's unlikely they'll play those specific songs again for a long time.

"It marks a point in our career," says the guitarist. "We probably won't revisit songs on that live album. It's the end of that story for the material that's on there."

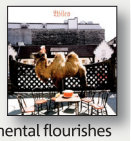
• Wilco (the album), Wilco:


Masterful balance of easy-going, George Harrison-esque guitar rock with experimental flourishes and artfully crafted lyrics.

• Timber Timbre, Timber Timbre:

Eccentric brand of haunting folk-blues with spooky organ backdrops, languid brush beats and reverb-soaked vocals.

• Far, Regina Spektor:

Spektor's great chops and playful vocals result in an array of intelligent piano-pop tracks with surprising depth.

Walkman turn 30

SoundCheck
Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

Amidst all the Michael Jackson news, a milestone passed almost unnoticed — the Sony Walkman turned 30 last week.

These days, everyone has a personal music device or seven. I'm pretty sure even my dog has an iPod Nano or two. But when Sony released the 14-ounce TPS-L2 on July 1, 1979, a series of complex cascading technological, economic and social events began. The Walkman not only changed the way we listened to music but the way we interact with each other. Look around: How many people do you see with ear buds right now? Before the Walkman, you wouldn't have seen any.

Ten facts about the Walkman:

1. All personal music players owe their existence to opera. Masaru Ibuka, the co-founder of Sony, ordered that the company make a small cassette player with lightweight earphones so he could enjoy his favourite operas on his many trans-Pacific and trans-Asia flights.

2. The Walkman was based on a prototype called the Pressman.

3. At first, the Walkman was known as the Soundabout in North America and the Stowaway in the U.K. because Ibuka-san hated the name "Walkman." But a screw-up in the marketing department resulted in all Soundabouts being promoted as Walkmans.

4. Original estimates were that it would sell 5,000 units a month. When it was introduced, demand was upwards of 25,000 a month. Total sales today? About 200 million.

5. The first Walkmans had two headphone jacks because no one at Sony could conceive of anyone not wanting to share their music with someone. Why would anyone want to walk around in a solitary bubble of music?

6. Sony endured a long legal battle with a German-Brazilian inventor named Andreas Pavel over his early '70s device called the Stereobelt. They finally settled in 2004.

7. Although many other companies started making personal music devices, the Walkman became such a cultural touchstone that people referred to every such device regardless of manufacture as a "Walkman." Kind of like Kleenex or Aspirin.

8. More than 300 personal CD players, MiniDisc units, digital players and even video players have all been marketed with the Walkman name.

9. The proper plural form of "Walkman" is "Walkman Personal Stereos." Do not refer to two or more of them as "Walkmen."

10. Sony still makes a cassette Walkman but it hasn't been updated since 2002.

"The Walkman not only changed the way we listened to music but the way we interact with each other."

The first Sony Walkman was released on July 1, 1979.

Plaskett thrilled to open for McCartney

An already good year is about to get even better for singer-songwriter Joel Plaskett.

The lanky Nova Scotian has landed a coveted openers' gig at Paul McCartney's lone Canadian performance this year — a large outdoor show this Saturday in Halifax.

"I'm ecstatic and superflattered we were chosen," Plaskett said during an interview this week. "It'll certainly be the biggest show of our career to date, no doubt."

Tens of thousands of fans are expected to gather on the Halifax Common — a giant green space in the centre of the city — for McCartney's first-ever show in Atlantic Canada.

Plaskett, who cites The Beatles' classics Abbey Road and the White Album as music staples growing up, said he was told that Sir Paul himself chose him for the opening spot.

He said someone in McCartney's management team received a copy of his latest album Three, liked it, gave it to the former Beatle, who in turn gave his approval.

Halifax rockers Wintersleep will also perform.

Plaskett, 34, believes the opportunity to open for the 67-year-old pop legend "would not have happened a year ago."

His career has been on an upward arc since the March release of Three, a 27-song three-disc opus of pop, rock and folk that was recorded in his basement studio in Dartmouth and is shortlisted for 2009 Polaris Music Prize.

"I've felt things ebb and flow over the years and slowly build and slowly build," said Plaskett.

Being a Top Model can take its toll

BRIAN COULTON
for Metro Canada

It can't be easy to outlast eight model hopefuls in pursuit of the Canada's Next Top Model title, let alone to face constant criticism from the show's panel of judges. But for the competition's three finalists, their harshest criticism may have come after the show began airing.

"The show makes me seem evil," said Calgary's Nikita Kiceluk, sitting on a leopard print couch alongside fellow finalists Linsay Willier from Edmonton and Winnipeg's Meaghan DeWarreng-Waller at Toronto's CTV headquarters.

The editorial-looking finalist with straight black hair and an edgy attitude believes her bold personality and routine sarcasm was taken out of context on the show, portraying her in a negative light.

It also generated a lot of hate mail for Kiceluk who said she is unsure how the presentation will affect her career.

"I'm not going to let that get in my way and I'm not going to not model because I know people don't want to look at my face. I'm sure some people do."

Many people want to look at DeWarreng-Waller, however. She said she has had to deal with loss of the anonymity she held before entering the competition.

Canada's Next Top Model concludes Tuesday night on CTV

"I have no private life, unless it's behind closed doors," she said. "You go out and people are watching, listening, following and wanting pictures." People even want her to kiss their babies, she said; a request made of her on her plane ride to Toronto the evening prior.

But children have posed a different problem for Willier. On an early episode in which the women were whisked to the Bahamas for a photo shoot, mention was made of Willier's history of fighting, rendering her a "tough chick", which she said is not the case at all.

"I work with kids. I don't want kids thinking that's cool, because it's not," she said. However, Willier maintains the belief "there's no such thing as bad publicity," despite any misrepresentation. "Now all of Canada knows our names."

What Canada may not know is the true motivation behind the apparent mockery of recently ousted Iranian immigrant Maryam Mas-soumi from North Vancouver, B.C., at the hands of Kiceluk and DeWarreng-Waller. The show's last episode showed the women imitating Mas-soumi's speech, which could be interpreted as racist humour.

"The whole Maryam thing was an ongoing joke between the girls in the house," said DeWarreng-Waller. "People don't always see it like that," added Kiceluk.

"They could think we're making fun of her because of her race, nationality or accent. It's none of the above."

University of Utah not happy with HBO show

NO PERMISSION The University of Utah says the HBO series Big Love can't use the school's name or logo without its permission.

University officials say they learned an episode of the show displayed a document with the school name and logo.

They say the document made it seem like the university is affiliated with the program about a fictitious polygamous family that lives in a Salt Lake City suburb.

University President Michael K. Young says Collegiate Images, the university's agent, has sent a cease-and-desist letter to HBO, demanding the logo be removed from the episode and not be used in the future.

HBO said it was confident that nothing in the program violates anyone's rights and that it "will be responding in due course."

Going Out

Toxic Avenger coming to Danforth

Dancap Productions president Aubrey Dan is going back to Jersey — via off-Broadway — for what he hopes is the company's next hit.

The Toxic Avenger, about a dweebish New Jerseyite who emerges from a vat of radioactive waste as a seven-foot mutant to wreak "green" havoc on his enemies, is slated to open on Halloween night at The Music Hall on Danforth Avenue.

"It's an eco-monster musical-comedy which has got a toxic love story and an environmental twist. The show really, really is a lot of fun," Dan said in a recent interview.

Following the hit Jersey Boys, still going strong at the Toronto Centre for the Arts, Dan said it seemed "serendipitous" to get the first new production of The Toxic Avenger outside of the Big Apple, where it won the 2009 Outer Critics Circle Award for Best New Off-Broadway Musical.

An artist's rendition of The Music Hall on Danforth Avenue after its facelift for the The Toxic Avenger.

Dan saw the show in New York just over two months ago and since then has secured a long-term leasing agreement for The Music Hall, an old rock'n'roll theatre venue a short hop from the Broadview subway station on the Danforth.

He's already working with the creative team behind the show — Bon Jovi keyboardist David Bryan, who wrote the music and collaborated on the lyrics with Joe DiPetro, who also wrote the story — on their next production. Memphis is about the birth of rock 'n' roll, slated to open for previews on Broadway in September.

Toxic is based on the 1984 sci-fi horror film by cult filmmaker Lloyd Kaufman, who happens to be a long-time fan of Toronto.

Kaufman, who was among the 1,000 walking dead who took part in Toronto's zombie walk last year, described the film as a "seminal" work that influenced filmmakers as diverse as Quentin Tarantino, Peter Jackson and Guillermo del Toro.

But Kaufman said it took almost a year for him and business partner Michael Herz to get even one theatre, located in Greenwich Village, to screen the film.

"It (film) was so out there, we could not get one cinema to play it. (But) the day it opened, there was a line around the block. Somehow the audience knew, I don't know how they knew because there (were) no trailers, no nothing, just some kind of crazy word of mouth," Kaufman said.

The musical version retains the "social satire" at the heart of the film, but without the graphic sex and violence, he added.

Dan, whose company has struggled to find good theatre space in downtown Toronto to mount productions, said he believes The Toxic Avenger will be good news for the nightlife along the Danforth.

As with Jersey Boys, Dan is committed to hiring Canadians for the upcoming production. "We have some amazing talent here." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICES

Conviction in teen's murder case

COURTS Marijuana dealer Jesse James Hollywood was convicted Wednesday of kidnapping and murdering a 15-year-old boy over an escalating drug debt, a crime that inspired the 2007 movie Alpha Dog.

Hollywood fled after the slaying and later testified he had lived in Colorado, the Mojave Desert and Canada before he was captured in Brazil. After deliberating about four days, a jury also found Hollywood, 29, guilty of the special circumstance allegation of being involved in a crime in which an assault weapon or machine-gun was used, making him eligible for the death penalty.

Hollywood was accused of orchestrating the kidnapping and eventual killing of Nicholas Markowitz in August 2000 because the teen's half brother owed a drug debt. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cooking software a piece of cake

KATHY BUCKWORTH
for Metro Canada

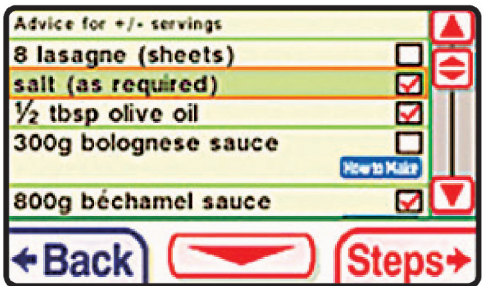
With four kids to feed on a daily basis, you'd think the last thing a busy mom would have the time to do is spend time on a Nintendo DSi. I used to think so too ... until I discovered their new software title, Personal Trainer: Cooking.

While it's not a surprise to find hundreds of recipes inside this virtual cooking coach, it's the more unique features you won't find on any cooking website or in any cookbook that make this the ideal kitchen companion, particularly when cooking with kids.

My 10-year-old daughter Bridget, otherwise known as the self-described "number one bacon fan," discovered the Ingredient Explanation section and scrolled quickly to her favourite food. "This smoked, salt cured pork belly has a smooth and tender texture." So that's what a pork belly is!

We breezed through some other explanations and then went to the Substitute Ingredients area, which I found to be extremely useful in a household where teenagers are constantly looting through my cupboards and refrigerators and stripping me of every condiment and baking ingredient. I learned that sake (not a staple in my house) could be substituted with water and a pinch of seasoning. Interesting ... but what's a pinch, really? I went to the terminology button and found that out too.

As I browsed around the program with my daughter, it occurred to me that, in my experience, having electronic equipment in a space where frequent liquids and powdery substances come into magnetic contact with little fingers might not be the best combination. I flashed back to an unfortunate incident with my kitchen counter, my laptop, and a bag of flour. However, the Nintendo folks have thought of even that.



A sample of what you will see on Personal Training: Cooking, which is now available for the Nintendo DSi.

"It's fun to use voice commands like 'continue,' 'more details' and 'repeat' so that messy hands don't get the Nintendo DS all covered in food," says Nintendo Canada's Matt Ryan.

With that in mind, Bridget and I decided to travel the Personal Trainer: Cooking world by doing just that: Travelling the world of cooking, by country. Alternate options include by ingredient — no Bridget, there isn't anything that includes bacon wrapped in bacon, sprinkled with bacon — requirements, or key word. We went to France and discovered a terrific recipe for onion tart (and bacon, natch), and started to follow the step by step cooking instructions.

"Personal Trainer: Cooking is a virtual cookbook that also includes ingredient checklists (which you can actually take to the store with you on your Nintendo DSi), tutorials by photo and video as well as a DS Chef that actually talks to you throughout the prep and cooking," explains Ryan.

Bridget flipped through the videos as I put together our tart. "You're doing that wrong, Mom! Try this!"

When we finished cooking, we discovered we could record what we had made, on which date, and how often. This, I think will be especially useful when the kids sit down to dinner and say, "Again? You always make this!" and I can honestly say, "Nope, not since March 3, 2009." Now pass the bacon.

L.A. spent $1.4M on Jackson event

FUNERAL Los Angeles spent $1.4 million US to provide security, traffic control and other services for Michael Jackson's memorial service, city officials said as they looked for ways to have others help the financially troubled city pick up the bill.

The amount included $1.1 million in overtime pay for the 4,173 officers who worked to secure Staples Center, Forest Lawn cemetery and other areas that attracted fans and members of the media, the Police Department said in a statement.

City officials said Wednesday that the remaining amount covered traffic control, cleanup and other costs related to Tuesday's public memorial service, which was attended by a total of more than 17,000 fans and watched by tens of millions of people.

A spokesman for the mayor said the bill was "far less" than the initial estimate of $4 million.

Dead Sea Scrolls land at the ROM

HANNAH ZITNER
for Metro Canada

Fragments of ancient history are on display at the Royal Ontario Museum in what is being called "one of the most important exhibitions in the ROM's history."

The Dead Sea Scrolls: Words that Changed the World, displays sections of a 2,000-year-old manuscript containing prayers, hymns, religious laws and stories still found in Jewish, Christian and Muslim holy books. Found between 1947 and 1956, the scrolls are the oldest known biblical records.

After a Bedouin looking for a stray goat found the first artifact in a cave near the Dead Sea, archeologists spent years scouring the area and piecing together 100,000 pieces of parchment and papyrus.

The result is 900 separate documents, 16 of which will be at the ROM in humidity-controlled, light-sensitive casing until early next year, including four scrolls that have never been publicly shown.

Recorded spoken Hebrew greets museum goers as the enter the exhibit while chanted Hebrew fades into the background as a reminder of the direct link between the ancient scrolls and the present, since many of the scroll's prayers are still sung in synagogues today.

Also on display are 200 relics, including ossuaries (boxes in which human bones are kept), coins and cooking utensils, found with the scrolls that help piece together life around 100 BCE.

Mirroring the physical fragility of the artifacts is the political delicateness of the exhibit.

The Palestinian Authority says the exhibit violates international law claiming Israel illegally removed the scrolls from a Jordanian controlled museum after the 1967 six-day war. They called on the Canadian government to step up and stop the exhibit from showing at the ROM.

Meanwhile, the Israel Antiquities Authority says Israel rightfully owns the scrolls and can exhibit them where they chose. Executives at the ROM reject the PA claim saying the exhibit complies with the law and has been shown around the world relatively protest free.

If the number of tickets sold is any indication, Torontonians seem pleased with the show as projected ticket sales were up by more than 50 per cent after day nine of the project.

One attendee, 83-year-old painter Ralph Booth, particularly enjoyed the visual reconstructions of the holy land and the interviews with scholars.

"It's a good animate show of the time of the temple ... I'd be interested to go and see the caves one day."

And if that doesn't happen, he says he'd like to recreate the scenes with his own paint and canvas.

Now until ...

- The Dead Sea Scrolls are on display at the Royal Ontario Museum until Sunday, Jan. 3, 2010.

Book of War, on display June 27 to Oct. 9.

share the love with Beth & Brian

Dear Beth & Brian,

Once a month my girlfriends and I get together for a "sit-on-the-couch-double-feature-chick-flick". The other day one of our favourite movies turned into a great Breyers moment when the DVD player broke 2 minutes into the film. Making the most of our situation, I went to get us 4 bowls of Breyers® Double Churn Dark Chocolate Velvet ice cream - we forgot all about our movie night and spent the rest of the evening laughing, talking and reconnecting with each other. It was the best ending ever.

Deliciously yours,
Erin

Brian:
I love "chick-flicks", I just wish they had more car chases and aliens.

Beth:
A touching Breyers Moment is now playing in every extravagantly rich carton of Breyers® Double Churn Dark Chocolate Velvet – it's the deliciously smooth way to share the love with those who matter the most.

Chronicling Niagara's remarkable growth

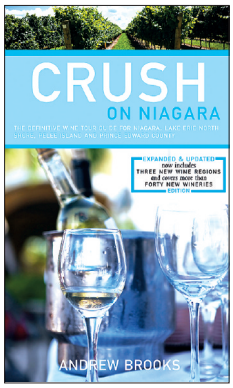
Updated winery guidebook features major revisions

The phenomenal changes and growth in Canada's largest wine-producing region had Andrew Brooks make major updates for his second edition of Crush on Niagara (Whitecap).

"So much has happened since 2004," says the sommelier and Niagara region tour director. "Winemakers have shifted around, wine production levels are up and new wineries are tripping over one another along the bench."

The "bench" he refers to occupies a narrow strip of land with vineyards clinging to its slopes. Warm days, cool nights and deep soils help to shape the character of the wines made at the area's wineries.

Within the past five years, the Niagara region has seen the number of wineries grow to 98, he says. Some are boutique operations producing less than 1,000 cases each year while others are publicly traded corporations approaching a production of one million cases.



The second edition of Crush on Niagara (Whitecap) by Andrew Brooks.

"New wineries are tripping over one another."
Andrew Brooks

Since the closure of fruit-processing plants in Niagara, grape growers have turned their fields to the Vitis vinifera, the noble wine grape, and now 90 per cent of grape production is supplied to the wine industry.

"The pioneers such as Chateau Des Charmes Estate are using windmills to moderate the cold temperatures to pull warm air and push it in among the vines in the vineyards," says Brooks.

Besides a directory with descriptions of Niagara wineries, the author has given histories of vineyards, winery hours and contact information and tips on purchasing wine with recommendations.

"We also have included places to stay like hotels, bed-and-breakfast establishments, inns and cottages as well as eateries," says Brooks. As well, he includes cooking schools and events to encourage cyclists to visit wineries.

He has extended the guide to include the wine regions of Prince Edward County in eastern Ontario, Lake Erie North Shore and Pelee Island.

"The wineries, particularly in Prince Edward County, have a lot of work ahead of them," says Brooks.

"They are trying to figure out what varieties go where and they are having winter issues, but with all those challenges, this region will have a lot to offer," he adds.

In Niagara, celebrity sports stars like hockey legend Wayne Gretzky and golfer Mike Weir have their own signature wineries.

"On the whole I think it's great for the industry that top sports figures are involved with the wine business," says Brooks.

Although it's well researched, one drawback to the guide is the absence of colour photography within its covers. Somehow it seems such a guide should contain the gorgeous images of the terroir and the wineries which unfortunately are in black and white. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Adirondacks site offers video tours

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. A redesigned website for New York's Adirondacks region offers aerial videos of the region, with a bird's-eye view of everything from main streets to mountain tops. The eight high-definition video tours can be found at visitadirondacks.com, by clicking on "first-time visitors" and "aerial tour."

Eight helicopter icons then appear on a map, each one linked to a different video, including films of the Adirondack Seaway, the Lake George region, the Lake Placid region and Adirondack lakes. The site also offers resources for trip-planning, accommodations and events.

New Maine site promotes inland destinations

ONLINE Many visitors to Maine associate the state with lobsters, coastal towns and Acadia National Park. But a new project called Maine Woods Discovery is hoping to promote tourism to the state's lakes, woods, mountains and other inland areas. A new website at mainewoodsdiscovery.com offers seven moderately priced vacation packages to make outdoor, recreational and cultural experiences — from hiking and fly fishing to art workshops — around the state more accessible.

Karsh at 100

• In commemoration of the celebrated photographer Yousuf Karsh and in honour of his 100th birthday year, Ottawa's Fairmont Château Laurier will join in the celebrations by throwing a special birthday party. On Saturday, July 18, free tours of the Reading Lounge and Karsh Suite will be available on a first come first served basis from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Space is limited, and reservations will not be taken in advance.

Even better, the Fairmont Château Laurier is featuring a special Karsh 100 rate — offering 100 rooms at the rate of $100 available on July 18 and July 19 only. Rooms are based on a Fairmont Room category, double occupancy and availability. Reservations can be made by calling 1 800-441-1414 and asking for the KARSH 100 Rate. A beautiful three-tier cake will be served starting at 10 a.m. The cake is to contain 180 eggs, 22 pounds of sugar, 20 pounds of butter and eight pounds of flour, and will be created by pastry Chef Ernst Frehner, who knew Karsh during the entire time he lived at the hotel. Yousuf Karsh's wife, Estrellita, will be on-site to cut the first piece of cake and to meet some tour goers throughout the day. The Karshes lived in the Fairmont Château Laurier from 1980 until 1998. The castle was also home to Karsh's studio from 1973 until its closing in 1992.

Justin to write golf book

FORE! Justin Timberlake is writing a book about golf, femalefirst.co.uk reports. The singer has reportedly employed a literary agent to send out a short synopsis of the planned tome, in the hope of securing a publishing deal.

The book is said to be a memoir that follows "Timberlake's time on the green and his experiences playing with various competitors." Agent David Vigliano got in touch with several editors last month, it has been claimed.

Timberlake's love of golf is well known, and he plays with an impressive six handicap. The 28-year-old singer owns his own golf course — the Big Creek Golf Course near Memphis — and has previously admitted his proudest moment relates to the sport.

He said: "I loved appearing on the cover of Golf Digest magazine. I'm not going to lie. I mean, I'm done. I don't have to do another magazine cover ever again."

It has also been claimed Timberlake refuses to take to the course with his girlfriend Jessica Biel as she is such a strong competitor.

A source said: "He prefers not to play with her since she's gotten so good."

Beckham can count on Cruise

SUPERSTAR FRIENDS David Beckham has one friend he turns to for advice more than anyone else: Tom Cruise. A new book, The Beckham Experiment by Sports Illustrated writer Grant Wahl, reportedly devotes an entire chapter to the superstar friendship, according to Gatecrasher.

Cruise has influenced a lot of Beckham's decisions since they met in 2003, including the name of one of the soccer star's kids, Cruz. But Beckham draws the line at Scientology.

"He's never turned around and said, 'That is what you should be doing,' because he would never do that. He and Katie have their beliefs," Beckham says.

Wardrobe malfunction

ACCIDENTAL FLASH Emma Watson laughed off an accidental red carpet wardrobe malfunction during an appearance on last night's Late Show With David Letterman, usmagazine.com reports.

The actress inadvertently flashed her underwear at Tuesday's London Harry Potter premiere while adjusting her floor-length vintage Ozzie Clark dress in the pouring rain.

"This was a small wardrobe malfunction that happens," Watson, 19, giggled to Letterman while holding her head in her hands. "I actually don't remember it happening."

There was one saving grace though. "At least I'm wearing underwear!" she joked.

Bateman hints at younger, wilder days

RISKY BUSINESS Though he's mellowed since then, Jason Batemen admits he went through a bit of a wild period after starting out in Hollywood as a child star.

"Even though he was pretty wild in those days, something about those dimples and that sweet face made you go, 'Oh, it's OK that you just drove up the street backwards in a Range Rover with the door wide open,'" she says.

Metro Recipe of the Day

Pork with Egg Noodles

INGREDIENTS:

Salt and black pepper
1 lb (500g) pork fillet
8 scallions
2/3 lb (300 g) celery
2/3 lb (300 g) small button mushrooms
1 tbsp (15 ml) olive oil
1/2 lb (230g) egg noodles
3 tbsp (45 ml) wholegrain mustard
3/4 cup (175 ml) whipping cream

METHOD:

1. Preheat oven to low setting to keep pork warm later. Put large pot of lightly salted water on to boil for noodles.
2. Cut pork into thin strips; season with pepper. Trim, rinse, and slice onions and celery; clean and slice mushrooms.
3. Heat half the olive oil in wok or frying pan over high heat and stir-fry pork 4–5 minutes, until lightly coloured. Remove and keep warm.
4. Add remaining oil to wok or pan with celery and half the scallions and stir-fry for 5 minutes. Add mushrooms and cook until soft.
5. Add noodles to boiling water, cook for 3 minutes, then drain well.
6. Stir mustard and whipping cream into vegetables and bring mixture to boil. Add pork, heat through, then season to taste.
7. Serve pork stir-fry spooned over noodles, sprinkled with remaining scallions.

Rolling Stone
"Brüno" ist outrageous. You'll hoot and holler.
Sacha Baron Cohen is the pure, untamed id of movie comedy. The hilarity is stratospherically outrageous. A comic call to arms. "Brüno" defies you not to see yourself in its funhouse mirror. And then dares you to laugh it off.
Make the shameless, sidesplitting "Brüno" numero uno on your funny-time list.
